

WebEx: COMPUTER WEB ACCESS SECURITY

- DLB Consulting, LLC

In today's highly technological world, we depend on computers for many business tasks: computers make it easier to track our bank accounts, make financial transactions, and handle our accounting matters. When it comes to financial matters, we want to make sure our computer systems are secure and yet conveniently accessible for the necessary users. We install anti-virus and firewall programs, have passwords to limit access, do regular backup of all important files, and want to do whatever possible to keep our computers up and running, and secure from intruders.

Security is of the highest importance when it involves private web access communications. WebEx is the most secure IP-based network for web collaboration, allowing for the secure transfer of private computer information to a remote site.

WebEx is Web Trust and SAS70 certified, as well as 508 and SCORM compliant. These certifications are awarded by an independent accountant audit whose criteria requires an entity to have effective security policies, disclose its key security practices, use procedures to achieve its documented system security objectives to be in alignment with its defined policies, and have controls to ensure that these policies are followed. WebEx's exclusive certification makes it the top choice of the United States government. WebEx is the best provider of web access communications; between the secured sender and receiver is a communications infrastructure made up of a series of data centers worldwide coupled with default encryption devices.

WebEx is the top web access site used by the United States federal government.

At DLB Consulting, we want your accounting to be protected by the most secure entity possible.

DLB subscribes to WebEx and our clients have given us the ability to remotely access necessary financial data to service them regularly. This convenient access is time saving, saves on travel time and expense, and gives us the ability to look up data immediately from our office when questions or a problem arises.

At DLB Consulting, we want your accounting and financial dealings to be protected by the most secure entity possible. We value the security, privacy, and availability of your data and trust WebEx to provide the best web access service between our companies.
